Webster, Noah, 1758–1843.
A dictionary of the English language: intended to exhibit: I. The origin and the affinities of every English word, as far as they have been ascertained, with its primary signification, as now generally established. II. The orthography and the pronunciation of words, as sanctioned by reputable usage, and where this usage is divided, as determinable by a reference to the principle of analogy. III. Accurate and discriminating definitions of technical and scientific terms, with numerous authorities and illustrations. To which are prefixed an introductory dissertation on the origin, history, and connection of the languages of western Asia and of Europe and a concise grammar, philosophical and practical, of the English language. Reprinted by E. H. Barker, Esq., from a copy communicated by the author, and containing many manuscript corrections and additions. London, Black, Young, and Young, 1832.
